Çatalca...

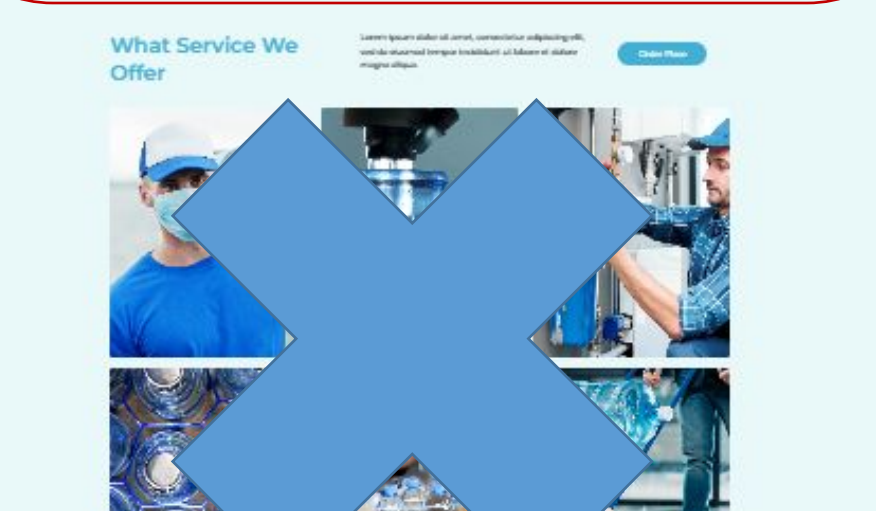

A natural basin that has supplied Istanbul with water and food since the Ancient Roman period; a place of vital importance for the city.

In 373 AD, as Istanbul's need for water grew, the Roman Empire built a great water system along the Çatalca–Istranca line to carry water to the city. The structure seen in the background is the remains of the approximately 1,600-year-old Kurşunlugerme Aqueduct, which carried Çatalca's water to the heart of Istanbul for centuries.

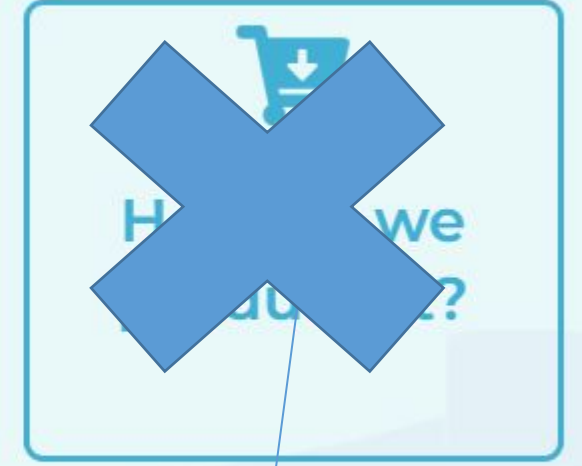

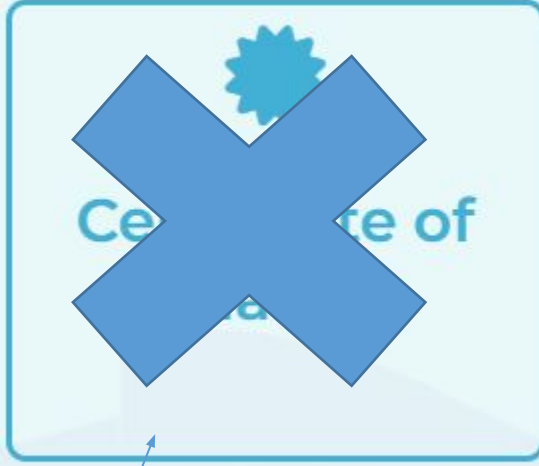

This water tradition inherited from Rome gained a new meaning during the Ottoman period. The fertile and green lands of Çatalca became one of the hunting, resting, and summer retreat areas of statesmen and members of the palace circle. Over time,

About Us

Since 2002, we have been bringing our natural spring water from the fertile nature of Çatalca to consumers through MEGA SU and TATLIPINAR brands.

We combine the strength we draw from our natural resources with modern production technologies and high hygiene standards. Our aim is to deliver safe, high-quality, and natural water to every table with the same care and dedication. Since the day we were founded, we have been producing with 100% domestic capital and we believe in the strength of local production. With our carboy water, cup water, and PET products, we provide reliable drinking water for both individual consumers and businesses.

I would like this section to have changing scenes.

- First scene: It should start with a slideshow and a short introductory text about our production method next to the stock image.
- Second scene: It should show a detailed explanation of the carboy production process.
- Third scene: It should show information about PET production.
- For both the carboy and PET sections, I would like to have animations next to the text/information to make the explanation more visual and engaging.
